INTRODUCTION: HOW TO APPROACH MEANING? ..... 9
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS ..... 17

PART I. COGNITIVE SEMIOTICS: THE BASICS

CHAPTER 1. INTRODUCING COGNITIVE SEMIOTICS ..... 21

- 1.1 The beginnings ..... 21
- 1.2 Extension of the term “semiotics” ..... 24
- 1.3 Methodology of cognitive semiotics ..... 26
- 1.4 Transdisciplinarity ..... 29
- 1.5 Phenomenological contributions ..... 30
- 1.6 “Third stage” of cognitive science ..... 31
- 1.7 Key research interests ..... 32
  - 1.7.1 Metatheoretical considerations ..... 32
  - 1.7.2 Semiotic development and evolution ..... 33
  - 1.7.3 Multimodality and gestures ..... 37
- 1.8 Cognitive semiotics and cognitivism ..... 38

CHAPTER 2. THE SEMIOTIC HIERARCHY FRAMEWORK ..... 41

- 2.1 Meaning theory – initial remarks ..... 41
- 2.2 The Semiotic Hierarchy as a theory of meaning ..... 43
  - 2.2.1 Level 1: Life ..... 43
  - 2.2.2 Level 2: Consciousness ..... 45
  - 2.2.3 Between life and consciousness: the first transition ..... 46
  - 2.2.4 Level 3: Signs ..... 48
  - 2.2.5 Between consciousness and signs: the second transition ..... 49
  - 2.2.6 Level 4: Language ..... 50
  - 2.2.7 From signs to language: the third transition ..... 52
- 2.3 The Semiotic Hierarchy: some objections ..... 54

PART II. MINDS AND MEANINGS

CHAPTER 3. “ANALYTIC” PHILOSOPHY OF MIND ..... 63

- 3.1 The Cartesian heritage ..... 63
- 3.2 Meaningful behavior ..... 66

3.2.1 Behaviorism and cognitive semiotics: mind, body, behavior .....	70
3.2.2 Problem of other minds .....	70
3.2.3 First-person knowledge .....	71
3.3 Reduction to the neural: meaning in the brain .....	72
3.3.1 Phenomenological fallacy and other problems .....	73
3.4 Meaning and function .....	75
3.4.1 On the way to functionalism: causal profiles .....	75
3.4.2 Mind and function .....	76
3.4.3 Qualia .....	79
3.4.4 The representational theory of mind .....	80
3.4.5 Functionalism extended .....	82
3.4.6 Functionalism and cognitive semiotics .....	84
3.4.7 Extended mind and meaning-making .....	86
3.5 Consciousness, functionally understood .....	87
3.6 The subjective mind .....	90
CHAPTER 4. THE PHENOMENOLOGICAL MIND AND MEANING-MAKING .....	93
4.1 How should phenomenology be approached? .....	93
4.2 Intentionality .....	95
4.2.1 Perception .....	97
4.2.2 Remembering .....	101
4.2.3 Imagination and anticipation .....	103
4.2.4 Signitive intentions .....	103
4.2.5 Pictorial intention .....	105
4.2.6 Indicational intentions .....	106
4.2.7 Categorical intentions .....	107
4.2.8 Types of intentionality and the Semiotic Hierarchy .....	109
4.3 So where are meanings? .....	109
4.4 The phenomenological method .....	111
4.5 Lifeworld .....	115
4.6 Intersubjectivity .....	116
4.7 Embodiment .....	119
4.8 A way to science .....	120
4.9 Phenomenology applied .....	122
4.9.1 Neurophenomenology .....	122
4.9.2 Front-loading phenomenology .....	124
4.9.3 A note on heterophenomenology .....	126
4.10 Summary: taking phenomenology seriously .....	127
PART III. COGNITION
CHAPTER 5. COGNITIVIST APPROACH TO COGNITION .....	135
5.1 “Cognitivism” or standard cognitive science .....	135
5.2 Symbolic approach: the three basic ideas .....	136
5.2.1 Limitations: magical number 7 .....	137
5.2.2 The generative approach to language .....	138

5.2.3 TOTE: organization of behavior and behind behavior .....	140
5.2.4 Cognitivism in a nutshell: perception .....	141
5.3 Connectionist approaches .....	143
5.3.1 Overview of the architecture .....	144
5.3.2 Connectionist representations .....	145
5.3.3 Manipulations on representations .....	147
5.4 Representations revisited .....	148
5.5 What cognitive science is supposed not to be .....	149
5.6 Standard cognitive science and meaning-making .....	151
5.7 Cognitivism – summary .....	153
5.8 Departure from cognitivism: dynamical systems .....	154
5.8.1 Dynamical systems – applications .....	156
CHAPTER 6. BEYOND COGNITIVISM? .....	159
6.1 Problems with cognitivism .....	159
6.2 The enactive approach: cognition as interaction .....	160
6.2.1 Meaning-making in perception I: Gibson’s ecological psychology .....	163
6.2.2 Meaning-making in perception II: “skillful bodily activity” .....	167
6.2.3 Experiences .....	169
6.2.4 Foundations of meaning: autonomy and sense-making .....	170
6.2.5 Consciousness and phenomenology .....	172
6.2.6 Radical enactivism: Hutto and Myin .....	173
6.2.7 Enactivism in cognitive semiotics .....	175
6.3 Embodied cognition .....	175
6.3.1 The two approaches to embodiment .....	178
6.3.2 Embodiment in practice .....	179
6.3.3 How to overcome the limitations? .....	181
6.3.4 Six faces of embodiment .....	183
6.3.5 Summarizing embodiment .....	184
6.4 Extended cognition .....	185
6.4.1 Constitution and the cognitive .....	186
6.4.2 What is a cognitive system? .....	187
6.5 The embedded mind: a short note .....	190
6.6 4e+a (or rather 2e+a) .....	191
6.7 Representations .....	196
6.7.1 Representations and cognitive semiotics .....	199
6.8 Summary: cognitive science, cognitive sciences .....	200

PART IV. SEMIOSIS

CHAPTER 7. TOWARDS A SEMIOTICS FOR COGNITIVE SEMIOTICS .....	209
7.1 Semiotics, sign, semiosis .....	209
7.2 What is a sign: The Stoics .....	210
7.2.1 Kinds of signs .....	210
7.2.2 Sign, proposition and conditional .....	211
7.2.3 Signs and language .....	212

7.2.4 “Reading the world”: semeia and cognitive semiotics .....	213
7.3 Peircean semiotics .....	214
7.3.1 Signs and cognition .....	215
7.3.2 Sign, the definition(s) .....	217
7.3.3 Peircean semiosis as meaning-making .....	221
7.3.4 The second trichotomy .....	222
7.3.5 Meanings beyond signs .....	225
7.3.6 Peircean cognitive semiotics .....	226
7.4 Semiotics for cognitive semiotics: Sonesson .....	227
7.4.1 Perceptual meaning .....	227
7.4.2 Sonesson’s notion of a sign .....	228
7.4.3 Phenomenology and semiotics .....	231
7.5 Semiotics and empirical studies .....	234
7.5.1 Emergence of sign function empirically addressed .....	235
7.5.2 Semiotics for cognitive semiotics: applications .....	237
7.5.2.1 Study I: understanding iconicity .....	238
7.5.2.2 Study II: the role of semiotic vehicles in communication .....	239
7.6 In sum: the conceptual-empirical spiral .....	241
CHAPTER 8. COGNITIVISM: MODELING SEMIOSIS .....	243
8.1 Back to cognitivism: a method .....	243
8.1.1 Cognitive architectures .....	244
8.1.2 Cognitive modeling: an example application .....	246
8.1.3 Cognitive (computational) modeling .....	248
8.2 Cognitive modeling of semiosis .....	250
8.2.1 What is modeled: semiotic systems .....	251
8.2.2 Approaches to semiosis .....	253
8.2.3 Cognitive architecture for semiosis: GLAiR & snarpy .....	255
8.2.4 Semiosis implemented .....	257
8.2.5 Further observations .....	266
8.2.6 Re-interpretation .....	271
8.2.7 Using a sign as a sign .....	273
8.3 Summary: cognitive modeling of meaning-making .....	275
CONCLUDING REMARKS: WAYS TO COGNITIVE SEMIOTICS RECONSIDERED .....	277
Common starting point .....	277
Complications on the road .....	279
The forking of paths .....	281
On the cognitivist path .....	281
Back on the common road? .....	283
What’s on the horizon .....	283
Cognitivism on the horizon .....	285
The last signpost on the road .....	286
